Skye Perryman, one of those mentioned at the outset of the podcast as a heroine, is President and CEO of Democracy Forward.

Discussion Questions

- How might the model of Jesus transform how we view heroism in our current organizational or community efforts?
- What does it mean to label Jesus a “hero,” and which of his actions best support this description?
- When reflecting on the narrative of Jesus, which specific quality resonates most strongly as heroic in today's world?

Make a list of your heroes/heroines. Then ask yourself how each of the following six statements describe your heroes/heroines. (See Chapter 4: The Integrity Wheel—Heroes/Heroines or listen again to the podcast for a fuller description of each trait.)

Heroes/heroines are real.

Heroes/heroines have a sense of dedication to a cause.

Heroes/heroines have focus.

Heroes/heroines sacrifice.

Heroes/heroines are consistent.

Heroes/heroines are mentors.

How do you react/respond to this sentence from the conclusion to Chapter 3 of “The Integrity Wheel”? In many ways we are expected to follow the vision, the calling, the modeling, of our heroes/heroines not blindly but recognizing we are to become heroes/heroines for others.
